Legal loophole throws courts into confusion

MELBOURNE: Fifteen thousand Victorian court cases in involving charges from speeding to indecent assault, could be "tripped" by a technicality which would allow the charges to be thrown out of court.

The loophole, which was first thought to relate only to traffic offences, extends to all summary offences in the Victorian District Court, including the offence of indecent exposure.

Mr Bernard Rogerson, Victorian Director of Public Prosecution, said the loophole was first noticed by the Victorian Director of Public Prosecution, Mr Bernard Rogerson, who put an urgent application to the Victorian District Court to close the loophole.

In the meantime, he had advised the Victorian Director of Public Prosecution, Mr Bernard Rogerson, who put an urgent application to the Victorian District Court to close the loophole.
